As a result of our indifference to the aggression of foreign lines on our Pacific shipping interests our exports to Japan in 1892 reached the meager value of

although in the same year we bought of that country worth. In order to sell to Japan we must first of all have direct and quick communication with her.

THE BURNING QUESTION.

Frankfort Journal.—Now that the Capital question is settled what's the matter with puttin' down brick streets and washin' out the gutters?

DID FREE-TRADE DO IT?

Engineering Magazine.—The United States is now the leading manufacturing country in the world. We have far outstripped all other Nations in the magnitude of our industrial operations. It is almost incomprehensible that in ten years the increase in capital invested in manufactures should exceed the total invested only twenty years ago. The value of our manufactured products increased about 60 per cent.; add 60 per cent. to the output of 1890 and we would have $13,700,000,000 in 1900—but that is too much to expect.

The same rate of growth in mining interests in this decade as in the last would make our mineral output in 1900 nearly $1,200,000,000, while a smaller percentage of gain, only equaling in volume the total increase in 1890 over 1880, would bring the figures to over $850,000,000. If our coal miners add to the output of 1890 as many tons as they added to that of 1880, ignoring in this the percentage of growth, 217,000,000 tons will be the production of 1900. No other country in the world ever advanced in population and wealth as the United States is doing. The progress of the past shows no signs of halting. In fact, the development of our foreign and domestic trade and commerce, and of our industrial interests, is steadily broadening out.

Contrast our position and condition with Europe, with resources surpassing those of all Europe, with wealth-creating possibilities in soil, minerals, timber and climate unequalled by Europe, and practically without limit to their profitable utilization, with a homogeneous population of 65,000,000 people unexposed by the arbitrary regulations of half a dozen different Governments, and free from the drain of standing armies, the United States justly commands the wonder and admiration of the world.

Great Britain is no longer the manufacturing center of the world, for we have taken the foremost position in that line. Its vast iron and steel business is yearly increasing in cost of production, while ours is decreasing. It cannot meet the world's growing demand for iron and steel because it cannot increase its production to any great extent. It produces less pig iron now than it did ten years ago. Much of its ore it imports from distant countries. Its cotton is all imported. It spends about $700,000,000 a year for foreign food-stuffs.

On the continent every Nation is burdened with debt, and none of them can ever hope to pay off its obligations. Measured by their natural resources and advantages for continued growth against their debts and the many disadvantages under which they labor, they are practically bankrupt. In all of them the cost of production and living must steadily increase. In the United States we have scarcely laid the foundation for our future greatness. In natural resources we are richer than all of Europe; we are paying off our debts faster than they are due, we have barely scratched the ground in the development of our mineral wealth, and our agricultural growth can scarcely be limited.

A COUNTRY dance at the home of Casper Hartlage, nine miles South of Louisville, ended in riot and murder Saturday night. Railroad men ranged themselves against the farmers, and a fusillade was fired in the darkened room. John Sheeley was killed and his brother Jacob fatally wounded. Jacob Nagle, who fired the shot that killed Sheeley, was carried off by his friends, wounded.

THE Halbert incident, says The Courier Journal, has almost been forgotten by the Legislature which he was alleged to have accused of unutterable rascality, but it still lives in the Flemingsburg and Vanceburg press as a personal controversy between friends of Mr. Halbert, the gentleman who did the talking, and the friends of Senator Huff, the gentleman who saw that it got into the papers.

Advertising Started In, Merit Made It Popular.

Dr. T. P. Hubbard, who is engaged in the drug business at Wolcott, Vt., says: "Advertising started the sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here, but it now sells on its merits, and all who use it speak highly of it." When troubled with a cough or cold, give it a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. It is also a certain cure for croup in children. 50 cent bottles for sale by Power & Reynolds, Druggists.

Twice Married.
W. W. Gillespie, the well-known theatrical performer of this city, was married yesterday morning to Miss Lizzie W. Heddlston of this county. The ceremony was performed by Judge Pfister at his office. There is a little touch of romance connected with the history of this couple. They had been married to each other in 1890, and two years later came a legal separation. Yesterday came the happy climax. THE LEDGER extends congratulations and good wishes.

OH, MY! OH, ME!
One of Society's Pets in a Fair Way to Reach the Pen.

A regular dude!
And smokes stinkarettes!
And carries six big canes a day!
And has more good clothes than anybody!
And wears a plug hat!
And "glosses!"
And doesn't work!
And always has money!
And just "too-too" among the addle-pated gals.

As he doesn't pursue any honest avocation, and has all the foregoing paraphernalia in rich abundance, it need surprise no one to learn that "Toopy" Browning was yesterday placed under arrest for obtaining goods under false pretenses.

He had gone to Miner's and procured a pair of $6 shoes, saying he wanted to show them to pa, and if they didn't suit he would return them.

Instead, he stepped outside and sold the shoes to another party for $2 cash. And on this money he went to the circus Friday night and had a hell of a time!

As this was the second time Browning had played this trick on Mr. Miner, he concluded to put a quietus on the fellow.

Hence his arrest by Sheriff Jefferson and his probable prosecution by the Commonwealth.

A Big Raise.
Word has been received by County Judge Pfister that the State Board of Equalization has raised the assessment of Mason county 17 per cent. on farm lands and personal property and 15 per cent. on town lots.

In some other counties, Boyle for instance, the assessment has been reduced quite a much.

It looks like a screw loose somewhere.

Error in Location.
Some two weeks ago a special from Mt. Carmel to The Cincinnati Post gave the particulars of a fight between Joe Warder and Amos Riggs, citizens of that neighborhood, in which Warder was out. An item concerning the affair afterward appeared in a local paper.

The fight came off all right enough, but the battle was located at the wrong spot by the newspapers.

The fight occurred on what is known as the Hillside farm, occupied by James C. Thomas, and not on Champ Farrow's premises as reported.

Mr. Farrow feels aggrieved that his place should have been made the object of such notoriety. To his knowledge Riggs was never on his place and Warder has not been for months.

BRACKEN ODDFELLOWS.
Adelphion Lodge No. 312 Instituted at Petra With Bright Prospects.

There were 19 charter members. And some 15 more good men and true have already signified their intentions to join the ranks of this great brotherhood. The visitors speak in the highest terms of the kind treatment received at the hands of the Bracken brethren, a number of whom went from Augusta to assist in the beautiful work.

TEN THOUSAND!

WANTED BY A LADY WHO WAS SEARCHED BY OFFICERS.

The Sequel to a Robbery at a Maysville Hotel—Two Officers Sued for Heavy Damages.

Since Friday last there have been sensational rumors afloat in this city concerning an alleged robbery at the St. James Hotel and a subsequent searching of a person suspected. This person happened to be a female, and therein lies the ground for all comment.

The statements going the public rounds were various and conflicting, and while the substance of the story has appeared in several newspapers, the accounts are strikingly dissimilar.

THE LEDGER took pains to interview representatives of both sides of the controversy and a somewhat romantic tale was deduced, like the following:

Some three weeks ago a woman applied at the St. James Hotel for lodging and board. She presented a lady-like appearance and Landlord Rosser accepted her as a guest without hesitation.

She registered as Mrs. Christina A. Daniels of Ashland, Ky. She told that she was a widow and the mother of two children, who are at Ashland. Her husband, she said, died about three years ago. She is a good looking blonde, small in stature and apparently about 35 years of age.

As a means of earning a livelihood she sold preparations for curling the hair and otherwise beautifying the features of those of her own sex.

Mine Host Rosser and his family took an interest in their energetic guest and allowed her to do work as a domestic in payment for her board. She gave up her room and moved into the more private part of the house.

The room adjoining the one to which she was first assigned was occupied by Mr. Smith, Agent for the Sun Life Insurance Company, and his wife.

All went well until one day last week Mr. Smith missed some money, which he claimed had been taken from his room. Some of the money was in a purse belonging to his wife, and some was in a trunk, amounting in all to about $24.

The loss was reported to Mr. Rosser, the proprietor, who, on Friday morning last, enlisted the services of Chief of Police E. W. Fitzgerald to aid in ferreting out the thief.

Chief Fitzgerald, in company with Constable W. H. Dawson, went to the hotel and began to make examinations.

Mrs. Daniels was not at that time suspected. Mr. Smith was strongly suspicious of another person, a boarder by the name of Boyd. This person was sent for, questioned, searched and pronounced innocent. The servants were examined and cross-examined, but no tidings of the mysteriously missing money could be found. Different rooms in the building were examined, but without avail.

In going through Mrs. Daniels's apartments Captain Fitzgerald came across some letters addressed to Mrs. Alice Smith and also a bill for some face powder made out in the same name.

Up to this time the officers had not heard of Mrs. Daniels.

The fact that this lady, who had let it be understood that her name was Daniels, should have her mail addressed to Mrs. Alice Smith and bills for her purchases made out in the same way required an investigation, thought the officers and Landlord Rosser.

Accordingly Mrs. Daniels was called into consultation. She was acquainted with the discovery just made and an explanation asked. She stated that she had pawned a ring in order to get some needed articles and being sensitive did not wish to reveal her true identity, and consequently assumed the name Alice Smith.

All at once it dawned upon somebody that she might know something about Smith's money.

Here is where the stories of the characters in the drama begin to diverge.

Captain Fitzgerald says that he politely asked her if she objected to being searched and she readily agreed.

Mrs. Daniels says she only submitted at the stern command of the official.

The Chief says that she unfurnished her own clothes, as far as they were unfurnished, which consisted only of an opening made in the front of her dress from the throat to the waist. She then unfurnished her corsets, says Mr. Fitzgerald, with her own hands and at no solicitation on his part. An undershirt, cut high in the neck, entirely concealed her person. Constable Dawson made the search, so the officers say, respectfully and as gently as a fond mother would look for a troublesome pin in the clothing of a favorite babe. Her skirts were neither lowered from the waist nor raised above the tops of her shoes.

Mrs. Daniels, on the other hand, claims to have been treated with the greatest indignity. She says the officers compelled her to disrobe, and that she took off garment after garment until but little remained except her blouses.

She also claims that Constable Dawson did the manual part of the work.

The whole affair will be aired in the courts.

Mrs. Daniels, through her attorneys, Adna A. Wadsworth of this city and William Poage of Ashland, will institute suit against the officers for $10,000 damages.

Attorney Poage bespeaks for Mrs. Daniels an excellent character.

Good Service.

To accommodate the large World's Fair travel the Chesapeake and Ohio trains Nos. 1 and 2 will now run through, without change, all cars between Washington and Chicago over the Chesapeake and Ohio and Big Four routes.

THE OLD SETTLERS.

Grand Reunion at Ruggles Campgrounds on the Fourth.

There will be a grand reunion on the coming Fourth of July at Ruggles Campgrounds of the old citizens of Mason, Lewis and Fleming counties.

It will be a gala day for the old people and no pains will be spared to make it one of exceptional enjoyment for all.

All of the Sunday-schools in the counties named have been invited and are expected to be present.

There will be good speakers on hand and excellent music. Among the speakers will be Judge A. E. Cole, Judge Emory Whitaker, Judge Thomas R. Pfister, Adna A. Wadsworth and George W. Adair.

A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to be present and bring well-filled baskets. Let everybody take it upon himself or herself to bring some old person.

The officers of the day and the various committees in charge are composed of well known citizens of the three counties.

Sunday Excursions.

Commencing June 18th the Chesapeake and Ohio re-established Sunday excursion trains to and from Cincinnati. A train will leave Cincinnati at 8:10 a. m. for South Portsmouth. Returning, leave South Portsmouth at 8:45 p. m. Time in each direction four hours. Another train will leave Huntington at 5:10 a. m. and reach Cincinnati at 11 a. m. Returning, leave Cincinnati at 6:45 p. m. Excursion tickets will be sold between all stations.

Among the attractive Sunday features in Cincinnati are the free concerts at Eden Park, the Zoo and professional baseball. The schedule provides, in addition to the excursion to Cincinnati, a trip to almost any other point on the Cincinnati Division with facilities for returning the same evening. Round trip, half fare or less.

SIGGER IN THE WOODPILE.

A Bill in the Legislature That Wants to Know, You Know.

Dr. Woods has introduced in the Legislature a resolution which rather squints at a "nigger in the woodpile" in the expenditure by the Kentucky Board of World's Fair Commissioners of the $100,000 appropriated to make an exhibit of the state's resources.

It is in fact generally estimated by the press of the state that the results of the Board's expenditures are inadequate and by no means as creditable a showing as the public had reason to expect.

Citizens visiting these exhibits return home full of unfavorable criticism of the Board, and the resolution requests on behalf of the House a full itemized statement of money received and paid out, and of all salaries and payments made or to be made to them.

It was adopted unanimously and a copy will go to President Dulaney at Chicago.

Read it in His Paper.

People who never read the advertisements in their newspapers miss more than they presume. Jonathan Kenison of Bolan, Worth county, Ia., who had been troubled with rheumatism in his back, arms and shoulders, read an item in his paper about how a prominent German citizen of Ft. Madison had been cured. He procured the same medicine, and to use his own words, "It cured me right up."

He also says: "A neighbor and his wife were both sick in bed with rheumatism. Their boy was over to my house and said they were so bad that he had to do the cooking. I told him of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and how it had cured me. He got a bottle and it cured them up in a week. I have great faith in Pain Balm and believe it will cure the worst cases of rheumatism. Fifty-cent bottles for sale by Power & Reynolds, druggists.

"NOT GUILTY."

Lizzie Andrew Borden a Free Woman Again.

A Jury Pronounces That She Did Not Commit the Fall River Murder.

Cheer Upon Cheer Broke Out Upon the Stillness of the Mid-Summer Afternoon Over the Verdict—Miss Borden Surrounded by a Crowd of Friends.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 21.—There was a whirl of excitement in the courthouse here Tuesday while awaiting the verdict of the jury in the Borden case. Amid suppressed but intense excitement the jurors filed into the room. Then the clerk, as is the custom, called upon the prisoner to look upon the jury and raise her head.

Lizzie Borden arose, trembling, to her feet, and it was with difficulty that she gained her feet, but when once standing she appeared as firm as a rock. Her white face was turned calmly toward the men who held her fate in their keeping.

"Gentlemen, look upon the prisoner," said the judge. "Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict, what say you Mr. Foreman?" Before the judge had finished speaking, the foreman of the jury quickly replied "not guilty."

Cheer after cheer broke out upon the stillness of a midsummer afternoon like the report of distant artillery. The court studiously refrained from all attempt at suppression of this demonstration, and it was some minutes before all became again silenced and still. When order was again restored the formal question was asked: "You say, Mr. Foreman, not guilty, so you say, so you all say."

"Lizzie Andrew Borden," said the judge, "the jury has judged you not guilty of the crime of which you were charged. You are hereby discharged from custody." Then District Attorney Knowlton arose and said: "There are two more indictments charging the same crime upon Lizzie Borden. These indictments are of another form, but refer to the same offense. In view of the verdict just entered I desire to enter a nolle prosequi."

District Attorney Knowlton then turned to the counsel for the defense, and, looking straight at ex-Gov. Robinson, said: "I desire to congratulate you upon the result of your labors." Turning toward the jury, Chief Justice Mason then remarked: "The court desires to express gratification at the fidelity and the earnestness with which you have attended to these arduous duties. We appreciate the hardships you have undergone and the discomforts of the long trial, but we hope you will realize the fact that under our form of law that all this is necessary. You will go to your homes with a consciousness that your actions will be approved by your own consciences and by the law abiding, law loving people of the state of Massachusetts. You are now excused from further attendance at this term of court."

All the calm firmness of Judge Mason had apparently forsaken him. He spoke with evident emotion and few there were who failed to be affected by the importance of the time and the place. To the very last Lizzie was the same self-contained, self-reliant creature that she has been ever since the slain of evidence made her a name last August. As she stood before that jury, her right hand raised to Heaven, gazing into the faces of the men, whose words, in a moment more, would show whether she would go free or whether she would be convicted of one of the most horrible crimes in the annals of history, her face turned whiter than at any time during the trial; her little black gloved hands trembled and she seemed to fully appreciate the important issue of so deep a moment to her.

When the words, "not guilty" were pronounced the tension was removed. Then this little woman fell into a vacant chair and quick as lightning her face changed from the deadly pallor to a deep red flush. Then she bent her head on her hands and resting on the rail in front of her, silently wept. The reaction had come.

When the court ordered her to arise so that she might be discharged without delay, she heeded not the judge, apparently not hearing him. Her head still remained upon the rail to all appearances inanimate. Sheriff Kirby, who sat near her, touched her arm. When she arose it was feared that she must drop back again fainting, but she remained standing with her face bent low while the clerk pronounced the formal words which gave her freedom.

Immediately upon adjournment the jury expressed a desire to take the hand of Miss Borden, and the eyes of some who were present suffused with moisture. Gov. Robinson was the first to congratulate her, and even he, the trained attorney, could not repress his emotion.

Rev. Mr. Buck, her pastor, could only weep. Miss Borden was led into the judge's room and a reception was given, her which was participated in by the citizens of her own home at Fall River, as well as by the people of New Bedford.

Newspaper men, judges, court officers, the men who had been her jailers and even the men who had been her accusers, gathered around her to shake hands with her. Miss Borden left New Bedford in a carriage at 8:31 to return to her Fall River home.

Serious Riots.

VIENNA, June 21.—Serious riots have occurred at Brunn, the capital of Moravia, 70 miles northeast of here, between the workmen and the police, aided by the soldiers. The disturbances grew out of a demonstration in honor of the social victory in Germany. Several were badly hurt.

Forest Fire in Germany.

BRUNN, June 21.—The severe drought has caused numerous fires and a portion of the royal storage stores at Poldam have been destroyed.
